Fortnite Battle Royale has recently become one of the most popular games out of all that exist for mobile devices. Of course, at the moment it is only available for mobile devices with the iOS operating system, although it is expected that in the coming weeks it can make its official debut on Android, although according to all the rumors, it will not do so through Google Play, but must be downloaded through the official website of its developer, which is none other than Epic Games.

This game has been the result of Fortnite, a video game launching in the market in 2011, and which has not been successful until its launch for iOS devices. Currently the popular game for smartphones, dubbed Fortnite Battle Royale, is being marketed on the one hand and Fortnite: Saving the world on the other.

Both titles have been on the market in an official way since 2017, and in the case of Save the world it is available, only, for Windows, macOS, PlayStation 4 and Xbox One, while Battle Royale is available for Nintendo Switch, devices iOS as we have previously said, and is expected in the coming weeks for Android devices.

Although we are talking about two totally different games, they have great similarities to each other. Of course, this time, and as you already expected, the game at hand is the one available for mobile devices and tablets, which is none other than the Fortnite Battle Royale and which we will talk about long and hard below.

Fortnite benefits

This battle royale video game has centerians, millennials and even baby boomer who is out there fired alike. Some of the experts in the world of videogames explain to us that Fortnite was launched a couple of years ago as a multiplayer game, this kind of game in which you have to supply yourself with many weapons and construction, so the players go about battling that content to finish each other off. Fortnite's download numbers speak for themselves.

Fortnite has surpassed rival Player Unknown who was inspired by the Battle Royale novel written in 1999.

It has influenced a lot that they have put the Skins that are different costumes for the characters, it has gestures when you win, the colorful graphics draw attention. The famous figures imitate gestures when they win, famous figures in soccer such as Griezmann of Atletico de Madrid who makes a gesture with his hand on his forehead, it is a gesture of Fortnite that gives him a lot of popularity, visibility. There are even famous Basketball and Soccer players doing live shows on Fortnite's Twitch.

Epic Games, which is the developer of the title, opted for a very visual, very colorful, very lively graphic motorcycle, so that it can draw the attention of both 12-year-old children who are now playing video games, as well as those who are 16 years old and they take advantage of their free time to play, such as those of 20/30 years who do not find a barrier in this game, they do not see it as something complicated and inaccessible as in other genres that we can consider more of a niche.

There are players who are becoming famous not only for how well they play but also for the speed of their hands when it comes to building or how they destroy opponents. There is like a type of bomb that is a type of impulse that you throw on the ground and teleport you to another point on the map and there are people who use that to escape which would be the most common, for example, you see that they are shooting you in one area and throw it to distract them and move from there, but there are people who are using it to reach enemies or to run away and jump back from them and kill him in this way.

The key has also been that from the beginning you can download Fortnite for free both for mobile and for PC and also that the paid add-ons do not affect the gameplay.

That surprise factor, that feeling that if you are playing for 2 hours everything is so different from the rest and that you feel that the next one will be different from the rest makes the experience very attractive. It is a very creative game and that draws a lot of attention.
